

Alice Miller

Alice Miller writes poetry, essays and short fiction. Earlier this year she was awarded the Louis Johnson Writers' Bursary to allow her to complete her poetry manuscript, Farflungness, prone to. She has an MFA from the Iowa Writers' Workshop – where she was the Glenn Schaeffer Fellow – and an MA in Creative Writing with Distinction from the International Institute of Modern Letters (IIML).

Alice has taught creative writing at Massey University and the University of Iowa. In 2008, she was the co-winner of the Landfall Essay Competition. Her poetry has appeared (or is forthcoming) in various places, including Landfall; Sport; Best New Zealand Poems; Kaupapa: New Zealand poets, world issues; Notnostrums; and The Laurel Review. She is currently a historical researcher and writer for the Waitangi Tribunal in Wellington.
